

THE RACIST BACKGROUND NOISE

pervades our everyday life. Those with a migrant background, feel this the most. Be it from cops, politicians, governmental authorities or passersby. Racism is structural and a governmental tactic that concerns us all.

We all - but especially the high-income managers and bosses - profit from the cheap production in inhumane factories abroad and through the sale of weapons and military equipment to dictatorships. At the same time, prejudices are reinforced against people, who come here and at whose expense we live.

While politics and the economy cause fleeing, politicians are supposedly concerned about the welfare of the refugees. On the other hand it leads to selecting criteria, which selects people as „acceptable goods“ and rejects others as „spoiled goods“. Refugee camps, stronger control mechanisms and monitoring of borders keep the machinery running.

WE REFUSE TO ACCEPT THE ARTIFICIALLY CREATED BORDERS AND CATEGORIES

Racism serves as an outlet for the exploited for their own frustration, it plays those against each other who toil every day for some asshole, or those who have to pick up a portion of sadism at the Unemployment Office.

Racism distracts from looking at the reason for our problems in oppressive social conditions. Simplified enemy images serve to push through laws that create the possibility of unconditional exploitation and social insecurity of precarious workers, especially migrants. The fear of impoverishment and destruction of our alleged collateral is to be diverted because it could turn into anger otherwise. An anger that logically would be directed against politics, businesses, people and structures that drive our exploitation and control.
